Legal Source Guide for the Media

Finding qualified legal sources in the field of law has just gotten easier. The University of La Verne College of Law in Ontario, California can provide you with 21 professional sources in over 50 legal specialties. Not only do the professors at the La Verne Law regularly educate an extraordinarily high percentage of students who pass the California state bar examination on their first attempt, but as current educators in the field of law, they continue to have an impact on the judicial system every day.

About the University of La Verne College of Law

Located in Ontario, California, the University of La Verne College of Law serves over 3.8 million people as the only ABA-accredited law school in Inland Southern California and an additional 2.2 million people in San Gabriel Valley and Eastern Los Angeles County.

Established in 1970, La Verne Law adheres to the ideals and vision of the University of La Verne and is recognized as a progressive school, integrating time-honored methods in teaching the law with the most advanced technology available. Known for its emphasis on advocacy, the law school offers small classes that feature a traditional curriculum and practical skills taught by respected, practice-proven faculty focused on individual students' needs and a prominent and supportive alumni network, both grounded in a commitment to ethics and service.
